Add a new driveway Add elegance, strength and a lot more besides

You can be sure that we will create for you a beautiful, individual approach to your home that will last for generations to come.

We raise the standard when building you a driveway! What you see on top will look fabulous thanks to the tremendous designs we have in our range, the quality of the blocks themselves, the detailing and, of course, the attention we take from design to construction.

But what you do not see is equally important-in fact, probably more so. Enormous care goes into the design, preparation and construction of the foundations for your driveway. Building it properly means that it will be able to handle surface and storm water in line with planning regulations. Ensuring that the base and sub- base are strong enough, level enough and properly compacted to our own rigidly laid down standards means a driveway that is more stable, stronger and less prone to subsidence, even after years of use.

Every member of our team of advisers, designers and installers is dedicated to ensuring that your driveway exceeds every requirement and expectation. The new legislation that has been introduced to tackle the issues of flooding and other environmental concerns mean you may need planning permission for some situations and types of new driveway and will always need to ensure that surface water can drain away efficiently without contributing to flood risks.

As leaders in the field, we confront this issue in two ways that each take into account the type of soil you have and the design of your drive: namely by constructing you an efficient soakaway that is big enough to cope with your surface water, even in a heavy storm, or by using our remarkable new Porlock permeable blocks that, in line with SUDS, allow rain water to pass straight into the prepared sub-surface below, reducing the risk of flooding.

Step by step guide of how your driveway installation will progress

1. Excavation

We dig out the area to correct depth and dispose of soil. Prepare and install necessary drainage.

2. Sub Base

We supply and lay a suitable hardcore to give a solid base for the driveway.

3. Lining The Base

A thick geotextile membrane is laid on the soil base to prevent the sub base mixing with the underlying layers. It can also help prevent weed growth.

5. Laying Course

We then spread, level and compact laying course sand, and screed to correct level.

6. Block Laying

Paving blocks are then laid in the customers choice of colour and pattern.

7. Cut & Fill

Next we measure and cut the final blocks to size and fill the joints.

8. Jointing & Compaction

Kiln-dried jointing sand is spread over the block surface and swept into the joints using a soft brush and then compacted with a wacker plate

9. Completion

Excess jointing sand can be swept off the surface and it is now ready to be used.

Paving Patterns

Block Paving can be laid in several different formats. When choosing block paving patterns, consideration should be given to load bearing areas such as driveways or parking areas. These applications require block paving to be laid in a inter-locking pattern for maximum strength and wear

Block Paving Designs

Block paving designs are unlimited. Each type of block paving stone or brick is available in a range of complementary colours and textures, by rotating the block in a different direction it can appear a different shade of colour. With the addition of octants or circles, paving features can be created. This can be complimented with the use of kerbs and edgings to create beautiful block paving designs & patterns

Herringbone Paving Patterns

Herringbone paving patterns are constructed from 2:1 blocks, eg: Marshalls Driveline 50. This means the bricks are twice as long as they are wide. Interlocked and laid as 90° herringbone or 45 herringbone the layout can be enhanced with subtle colour changes in blocks and or the use of pattern features such as circular or octant paving 45' extended herringbone is generally used on larger areas to enhance the block paving patterns aesthetics.

Stretcher Bond & Basket Weave Paving Patterns

Stretcher bond and basket weave paving patterns are used for pathways or patio areas with light foot traffic. These block paving patterns can be combined with octant and circle features to create beautiful designs.

Drainage

Recessed Manhole Covers

Recess tray covers, sometimes referred to as "Inset covers", are used within paved area to disguise the presence of manholes, inspection chambers and access fittings. Within an area of decorative, coloured or natural stone paving, they are invaluable, especially compared against the utilitarian covers commonly used in modern construction.

Linear Drainage Channels

The Linear Drain Channel is an easy and effective way of removing unwanted standing water into a domestic drain.

The protective grate is high-heel and child friendly, and the product sits flush with the floor, allowing for the passage of vehicles on a driveway. They can be fitted on driveways, patios and paths around the home and will work with any type of paving from block and flagstones to tarmac or concrete.

Kerbs and edging

Kerbs play an essential part in both your driveway and garden design, performing a number of functions and adding the finishing touch.

There are complementary kerbs to suit all paving ranges. All our kerbs can be laid in a variety of positions by simply rotating the unit to suit

By incorporating raised kerbs into your driveway or garden area, you will add real character and make your drive unique.

Edgings for driveways and garden areas come in all sorts of shapes, sizes and materials. The reasons for using an edging are manifold, but usually include one or more of the following...

To restrain the paving, keeping it in place- as with block paving

To create a step up or down between the paving and another surface

To create 'check' that keeps traffic on the driveway

To allow garden soil and/or turf to be kept separate from the paving

To keep vegetation/weeds out of the paving

Natural stone paving

There's no paving finer than natural stone; it's been used for thousands of years and represents one of man's earliest technologies - the ability to make a traversable pathway. It will outlast all of us, every unit is unique, it's a natural product with texture and colour determined by millennia of geological processes rather than modern chemical dyes, it's incredibly strong, hard-wearing and if all that wasn't enough, it's also beautiful.

Expertly installed by our specialist team it will last you a lifetime give us a call today to get your quote underway

Autumn Brown Natural Sandstone Paving is a really mellow blend with midbrown shades throughout. This gives the stone a warm, classic look.

Quite often, the brown tones are further enriched by purplish shadings. This colour works extremely well with older properties and is the preferred choice of those who like the more reddish colour of Autumn Brown as opposed to Raj Green.

Raj Green Paving is one of our most popular colours and it is no surprise why.

It blends with most surroundings and is a robust, hard stone which will last a lifetime if looked after. It has many shades of colouring throughout, but in summary, it is akin to reclaimed Yorkstone.

Resin driveways

A resin driveway is permeable, allowing rain water to drain through. Every particle of stone is covered in resin and minute voids are created during the laying process for drainage. As well as being decorative, a resin driveway is sustainable, practical and versatile. It doesn't soften in summer, freeze in winter or fade in sunlight. Maintenance is simple as weeds do not grow through it and there are no loose stones to sweep. Just brush and power wash occasionally to keep your resin driveway looking like new.

Joseph and the team were fantastic. We love our new garden. From getting the initial quote to getting the work done took us a little while because we were waiting on the sale of our previous house, but that wasn't as issue. When we were ready, Joseph was able to fit us in and the work was done swiftly and we couldn't be happier. Thank you!!!

Really pleased with my new driveway.
I was given a firm quote and approximate timescales after discussing my requirements - and not pressured to sign the contract like some firms. Joseph and the lads turned up when they said they would and completed on time both visits on two of the hottest days this summer They worked with me to also enable my requirements to be met - I had some drainage alterations and ironwork erection to complete at the same site/time. On completion the whole area was left tidy with all surplus/offcuts/rubbish removed. Brilliant job, highly recommended.
